

AUTISM AWARENESS MONTH

2nd April - Autism Awareness Training Day

To celebrate National Autism Awareness Month, Fairway Training are offering their Clients the opportunity of Autism Awareness Training with our lead trainer Danny Page.

Autism is a diverse and mystifying condition that has been the focus of much scientific research over the last few decades. The Autism Awareness Course aims to develop your understanding of autism and gives practical suggestions when working with Autistic individuals. The course is suitable for people within the health and social care sector, teachers, nursery nurses, parents and any one that is interested in Autism. It is important that people who work in the field have a sound theoretical understanding of how the condition manifests in people and this course will provide that knowledge. Therefore it is suitable for teachers, care workers, social workers, police, health workers, friends and families. This course will provide a comprehensive understanding of the condition and will give participants a thorough grounding in the most recent developments in autism theory. This course is designed to be followed by the Advanced Autism course.

For us, Autism Training is so much more; it's not just about helping people understand the most modern and relevant research into the field; it's about changing attitudes. We know that massive improvements are possible in people's lives and we promote this throughout our training. We don't simply repeat the mantra of "routine, routine, routine," we embrace developmental steps that can alter the course of a person's life. Our training is based on the most recent research in Autism and is a must for all professionals working in the field.

Once you have undertaken our Autism Awareness course, we thoroughly recommend that you undertake our Advanced Autism course to enhance your skills.
